Clients are referred from homeless shelters or various other government organizations. An intake form is completed to determine qualification. Homestretch serves homeless families with children, which is the primary eligibility qualification. Housing assistance is provided by paying rent or providing housing in homestead properties for up to two years until the family is self-sufficient. The intake process occurs as families graduate and additional housing is available. These are not grants, but assistance.

Part IV Supplemental Information

At any point in time, there are usually 61 families and 196 individuals, most of whom are children, residing in Homestretch units. While services are offered for all families, not all families are required to access the services. Some, like those in "transitioning-in-place" or affordable housing, may access services on a voluntary basis.
